EDITORIAL

“Siddharthini” is an annual collection of working research papers from our students started in 2019. Every year our students are encouraged to express their views and be open to the opportunities that research unveils. The main focus of our journal is to inculcate research paper writing abilities among the students through this platform.

In 2020, COVID-19 pandemic created a havoc in the world and changed our lives. Online life has become major part of our new life or new normal. In educational sector, many institutions had adopted online teaching and learning as core part. This had a huge impact on students as well as on teachers especially who were not used to online learning or teaching before.

This year, our goals are to explore their experiences during COVID-19 pandemic. Our students faced difficulties with remote learning, they more often spoke about emotional, mental, physical and other challenges that affect their ability to learn. Teachers too shared all the ups and downs tackled by them while teaching practical subjects online such as mathematics, accounts, costing and science practicals. Everyone who participated here tried to share their views and experiences.

Lastly, I would like to appreciate all the students and teachers who came forward and shared their experiences and views with us in this magazine.
